

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The concrete coloring tool is a lightweight, powder application device including a handle attached to the outside of a frame with raised edges completely enclosing a perforated metallic base to be used for evenly distributing powder over newly finished concrete. The frame may be square-shaped and the handle may be attached to the frame using a T-bracket. The T-bracket allows the angle of the handle relative to the frame to be easily adjusted to compensate for the height of the user or for the elevation of the application surface.